Avoiding Good Friday retirement, PCG chief steps down early

By Jerome Aning

AS THE Philippine Coast Guard (PCG) tightens its monitoring of sea travel during Holy Week, its chief would be hanging up his cap tomorrow.

PCG commandant Adm. Wilfredo Tamayo advanced his retirement by three days so he would not have to leave office on April 22, Good Friday.

Tamayo, who was appointed Coast Guard chief in June 2008 by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, was honored with a testimonial parade and review Friday at PCG headquarters in South Harbor, Manila.

"For all of you who will be left behind and who will eventually be given the opportunity to steer Team PCG, may I challenge you to lead it with WDT. These are my initials which mean wisdom, dedication and teamwork," Tamayo said in his speech.

He said he was looking forward to spending more time with his family and improving his golf handicap. He also intends to review his Master's thesis.

Tamayo is a 1979 graduate of the United States Coast Guard Academy in New London, Connecticut.

He recalled his first experience on board a Philippine Navy boat going after suspected smugglers.

He said his boat fired warning shots and intended to ram the other vessel, which turned out to be ferrying innocent passengers.

"It was fortunate we kept missing the target, otherwise we would have been court-martialed," he said.

Tamayo had the tough job of expanding PCG operations throughout the country's 7,100 islands and 36,289 kilometer coastline. He did this by increasing the number of PCG personnel from 3,000 to 5,000 today.

He said he expected the PCG to have 6,000 personnel by the end of the year as it strives to achieve its ideal 10,000 strong force.

He said the increasing economic activity in the Philippines, Southeast Asia and the Western Pacific would need an expanded Coast Guard to enforce maritime regulations and environmental laws.

"The Philippine islands are not divided by waters, but rather, our waters must unite the islands to form one strong maritime nation. In the same manner, the Philippines is not separated from our neighboring countries by waters, but rather it is the waters around us that unite us with our neighboring countries. Thus, cooperation with our international partners becomes natural and cooperation with our local partners becomes essential," he said.

Tepco to end nuke crisis in 6-9 months

TOKYO—The operator of the crippled nuclear power plant leaking radiation in northern Japan announced a plan on Sunday that would bring the crisis under control within six to nine months and allow some evacuated residents to return to their homes.

The phased road map for ending the crisis at the Fukushima Dai-ichi nuclear power plant, presented by Tokyo Electric Power Co. (Tepco) chairman Tsunehisa Katsumata at a news conference, included plans to cover the damaged reactor buildings to contain the radiation and eventually remove the nuclear fuel.

"We sincerely apologize for causing troubles," Katsumata said. "We are doing our utmost to prevent the crisis from further worsening."

Frustrations have been mounting over Tepco's failure to resolve the nuclear crisis more than a month after a catastrophic earthquake and tsunami hit Japan on March 11, knocking out power and cooling systems at the Fukushima Dai-ichi complex.

Katsumata, who was hammered by questions over his management responsibility, told reporters he was considering stepping down because of the crisis.

"I feel very responsible," he said.

Katsumata said he was not sure when the tens of thousands who had been forced to flee their homes because of the crisis could go back, but Trade Minister Banri Kaieda said some could return home within six to nine months.

"Of course, some people will be unable to return home, but we will keep everyone informed," he said, adding that the government hoped Tepco could contain the radiation sooner than the schedule announced Sunday.

In the first three months of the plan, the company hopes to steadily reduce the level of leaking radiation, Katsumata said. Three to six months after that, it hopes to get the release of radioactive materials firmly under control.

The company is focusing on cooling the reactors and spent fuel pools, decontaminating water that has been contaminated by radiation, mitigating the release of radiation into the atmosphere and soil, and measuring and reducing the amount of radiation affecting the evacuation area, he said.

Kaieda, the trade minister, said he hoped to see the process quickly shift from the first aid phase to a systematic and stable phase."

Prime Minister Naoto Kan, fighting criticism over his administration's handling of the disaster, has called resolving that the nuclear crisis is his "top priority."

"I take very seriously, and deeply regret, the nuclear accidents we have had at the Fukushima Dai-ichi plant. Bringing the situation under control at the earliest possible date is my top priority," Kan said in a commentary in the weekend edition of the International Herald Tribune.

As Japan has begun planning for reconstruction and mulling how to pay for it, Kan's political opponents have renewed calls for his resignation after [illegible] in the immediate aftermath of the disaster.

Thanking the international community for its support, Kan vowed to rebuild a country that's "highly resistant to natural disasters."

"I pledge that the Japanese government will promptly and thoroughly verify the cause of this accident, as well as share information and the lessons learned with the rest of the world to help prevent such accidents in the future," he said in the commentary, which also appeared in the New York Times and Washington Post. ## Pope turns 84

VATICAN CITY—Pope Benedict XVI spent his 84th birthday at work on Saturday, making appointments, giving a speech and receiving top aides while well-wishes arrived from around the world, including Queen Elizabeth II.

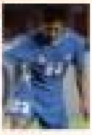

Benedict, who was born and baptized as Joseph Ratzinger on April 16, 1927, in the Bavarian town of Marktl am Inn, Germany, was "spending a normal working day," Vatican Radio said.

No rest for the Pope was immediately scheduled. His birthday fell on the eve of the start of a hectic stretch of Holy Week ceremonies, including Palm Sunday Mass in St. Peter's Square on Sunday morning and a 'Way of the Cross' procession at the Colosseum on Good Friday.

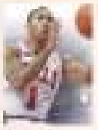

Birthday greetings poured in from around the world, Vatican Radio said, including from political and religious authorities, figures from the world of culture and [illegible].

The radio's English-language service quoted from the British queen's greeting to Benedict and her recollection of the pontiff's visit to England and Scotland in September.

"On the occasion of your 84th birthday, I have much pleasure in sending my warmest felicitations and prayers to Your Holiness, recalling with great fondness the memorable visit," the greeting said. AP

PLDT SME Nation launches the Bossing Ako campaign

PLDT smenation

In partnership with NEGOSYO

PLDT SME Nation recently launched the "Bossing Ako" campaign for 2011 at the Radisson Blu Hotel in Cebu City, featuring five iconic SME entrepreneurs from the southern capital– Alex Chuachay of Ben's Lechon, Merceditas R. Villo of Lolo Titoang's Bakery, Francisco David of 7D Mangoes, Butch Carungay of Atelier Avatar and Raymond Kalaong of Harbour City Dimsum.

The "Bossing Ako" campaign pays tribute to successful and inspiring figures in small to medium businesses, while highlighting their synergy with PLDT SME Nation's technology solutions. This year's theme is "Bossings are the Modern Day Heroes".

"Propelled by information and communication technology, SMEs can effectively compete with the larger, established corporations and achieve success not only locally but in the global marketplace as well,"

said PLDT SME Nation VP and Head Kat Luna-Abelarde. "Over the past three years, we have been pervasively reaching out to SMEs nationwide, with our commitment, 'SME Success Through Technology'. And our customers could not agree more. They realize that embracing technology as part of their business operation is no longer a choice but an imperative to survive in this hyper-competitive marketplace," she added.

The Bossing Ako campaign aims to share inspiring stories of entrepreneurs who have transformed their businesses, with technology as the prime catalyst. The stories of the five Cebu companies were deemed worthy of emulation and recognition and will serve as inspiration for other aspiring business people.

The evening also featured a presentation of prominent Cebu personalities hailed as heroes because of their significant achievements in various fields. They include Gov. Gwen Garcia as Public Service and Urban Development Hero, acclaimed furniture designer Kenneth Cobonpue as Arts and Design Hero, Mon Lopez of Go Negosyo as Business Hero and Atty. Mark Anthony del Mundo of International Justice Mission as Civic Action Hero.

Present at the launch are PLDT SME Nation executives, AVP and Marketing Head Ariel Aravio, Visible Business Head Nilo Bautista and 2010 Bossing Jay Aldeguer of Islands Souvenirs, as well as some of the 2011 Bossings, including Steve Benitez of Bo's Coffee, Bam Aquino and Mark Ruiz of Hapinoy, Rey and Arnie Lapid of R. Lapid's Chicharon and BBQ, Bobby and Joey Claudio of Toby's Sports, Yeva Mirasdo and Fred Mirasol of Yabbe Salon.

The event gathered prominent SME business owners, Cebu city officials and interesting business and lifestyle personalities. There were also special exhibitions from the following companies: Islands Souvenirs, Potato Corner, R. Lapid's Chicharon and Barbeque, Harbour City Dimsum, Marthagis Blue Water, Atelier Avatar, Shamrock, Lolo Titoang's Bakery, Balamban Liempo, Ben's Lechon, 7D Mangoes, Hoover Sausage, and Bo's Coffee.

BRISBANE—Here's a timely thought for Holy Week.

Paul White, musical director of "The Music of Andrew Lloyd Webber" (currently touring Australia and New Zealand), offers a theory on why the maestro's songs are widely regarded as classics—something people would always remember.

"I think Manila viewers will love the show," he notes. "Filipinos love big tunes with great words and beautiful melodies ... Music that speaks of love and soul-searching."

He points out that Webber's music has a certain spiritual aspect, too.

"There's an evangelical quality to his work and I really connect to it," he explains. "There is a depth in his music that touches people profoundly."

It goes beyond the most obviously religious of his musicals, "Jesus Christ Superstar," which is often staged and played during Lent all over the globe.

This innate depth is evident in the very construction of Webber's music—from "The Phantom of the Opera" to "Sunset Boulevard," White says.

"It's a musical footprint that quite often manifests itself in the plagal or Amen cadence. It's the fourth chord of the scale resolving to the first chord of the scale. Lots of his songs have that as part of the structure. [illegible]," he expounds.

Pivotal role

"Jesus Christ Superstar" played a pivotal role in White's decision to make music his life's work.

"When I was 10 or 11, I used to play the musical's title theme on the piano at a friend's house," he recalls. "I was fascinated by the chord changes which are very powerful."

Every night, when he plays the music in the two-and-a-half-hour show, he goes back to that moment when he was a kid in Adelaide.

"I knew these tunes by heart. To actually perform those songs in this production is quite exciting," he says.
